

Morse code

Sending Morse code has changed over the years from the old brass key to a modern electronic keyboard. Last Saturday visitors to the Peel Amateur Radio Club display at the Bramalea City Centre got a chance to try both and ask questions about the exciting world of Ham radio. Ready to help answer questions were Bruce Cowan, VE3GBC and Chuck Palmer, VE3AZA (right). Whether it's Morse code that's the ticket or talking to other Hams around the world or building your own equipment, more and more people are becoming radio amateurs. The Peel Club meets the first and third Tuesday of every month (except summer) beginning a new year this Tuesday night at the Old Courthouse, 3 Wellington St. E. (the north-east door leading to the basement).
